ARIEL LIANG: …here is the participation rate of the webinar attendees. By answering the final evaluation and the pop quiz, and you can see the line up above on the lighter blue says that on average close to 60% of participants, they will answer the pop quiz during the webinar. And then close to 45% of the total participants, they will answer the final evaluation at the end of the webinar. So a little bit lower, but it’s much better than before because when we use the simple survey or the e-mail methods, only two people ever answered those evaluations. So it’s a big improvement.

And then in terms of timing, Gisele has kindly identified two possible times. One is 1300 UTC, the other is 2000 UTC. And based on the results we asked people whether it’s too early, too late, or just right. And the majority of participants, they said, “Just right.” And you can see the orange bar shows that. However, we need to keep in mind that the participant name may come from a North America region or a European regions, so “just right” is just right for them. So we need to take into consideration that we have other participants in Asia Pacific. region and it may not be the perfect timing for them. So that’s about the timing.

And then next is in terms of technology use for the webinar, and on average 82% of the participants said it’s very good or good, so that’s a positive finding. And in terms of speakers, whether they have demonstrated a mastery of topics, on average is 92% of participants said they have demonstrated extremely strong or strong mastery of topics.

And next as the overall question, “Are you satisfied with the webinar?” 95% on average said they were extremely satisfied or satisfied. So these are all very positive results. And this graphics shows a correlation, so the orange line you see is people, they indicated they’re extremely satisfied with the webinar. And then there are three other lines. The blue one on the top is about the timing, and then there’s a green line that’s about the speaker’s mastery of topic, and then the darker blue line at the bottom is about the technology. And if you see the correlation, if it’s close to one means it’s positively correlated. If it’s close to zero, then there’s not much correlation. So this graphic just shows that the speaker’s mastery of topic is the most relevant to people’s satisfaction with the webinar. And the timing is second – sorry, the technology is the second, and the timing is the third.
And now in terms of pop quiz, we introduced this element into the webinar to keep people engaged during the webinar and also test whether they really paid attention to the details. And here we have three webinars that used these methods and on the red part you see on the slides shows whether people answered that question incorrectly. So some webinar have a lot of people didn't answer the questions incorrectly, like the third one about the At-Large website and glossary. But this doesn’t mean it’s bad, it means it could be a challenging question and make them think and not really promote – and just encourage them to pay more attention in the future. So these are the pop quiz.

And then this is the overall analysis. In summary, our participation rate has increased dramatically after we implemented this new method of using the poll in the Adobe Connect room. And then the second finding is more people participate in the pop quiz than the evaluation, and the possible reason could be some people, they cannot stay towards the end of the webinar so they skip the last part of doing evaluation. And also we have a lot of returning participants, and the evaluation questions are the same for each webinar, so they may – don’t want to do that again. So those are the possible reasons.

And then in terms of timing, both times work fine – 1300 UTC and 2000 UTC. Although 1300 UTC seemed perform a little bit better than 2000, but of course it’s still not super-friendly to people that live in Asia Pacific region. And then we will keep looking to other alternatives.

And then the fourth finding is based on our evaluation the technology used, the speakers, the quality, and the overall satisfaction of the webinar are really high, so those things contribute to the success of the programming 2015.

And then the fifth’s about correlations. It said the speakers’ mastery of topic is most relevant to people’s satisfaction of the webinar, and then the timing is the least.

And then lastly about pop quiz is that it’s just a really good way to get people engaged and we can’t really draw from the accuracy rate whether people paid attention or not because some of the questions are really challenging.

So that’s just a quick evaluation of the 2015 program. And also based on our discussion in the last Capacity Building Working Group call, Cheryl actually suggested we add a couple of more questions for the evaluation asking people’s background, whether they’re newcomers or experienced member and also includes whether which geographic locations they’re located. So we’ll make sure to include those questions in the final evaluation to make the finding more comprehensive.
So that’s all for this part. Thank you.

TIJANI BEN JEMAA: Thank you very much, Ariel. Ariel is doing very great job for us. Really we have a real support from our staff that make us do this work properly. As you know, today for example in the morning there was… We felt there is a need for a capacity building about the delegation and redelegation of the TLDs. So we will add this topic to the list for the second half of the year. Also, I don’t know, it was, I think, one month ago people suggested that we add accountability and the transition on the list, because now the path is almost finished. When we have the last reports, perhaps we will have a webinar about that and explain to our ALSs what is done, what have to be done, what will be done in the future. So those are perhaps the first suggestion for the second half of the year. But we will have to decide on that together in the Working Group, and the next call will be dedicated to that. Yes, Maureen. Please.

MAUREEN HILYARD: Thank you, Tijani. I think that the results do look very good and it is very reliant on the fact that it’s to do with the responses of those people who actually like to attend. And when the response rate from areas like the Pacific aren’t as great because they don’t get an opportunity to listen to the webinar, it can skew the results a little bit. But, yes, I agree with the sorts of things that Cheryl has mentioned. But I still have a concern that – and I think I might be preempting what Betsy may bring up in relation to ICANN Learn, is that there is some valuable information that is raised in our webinars and we really do need to align what… These webinars have been selected because they’ve been chosen by our users, and there needs to be follow-up. There needs to be some way in which the information can be used on an ongoing way and ICANN Learn being able to work in conjunction with the Capacity Building program can base some of those learning programs on what is developed.

TIJANI BEN JEMAA: This is agenda item number 4.

Okay. Thank you very much, Maureen. Useful, what you said. I may also say that for the quiz we are trying to improve also because perhaps we will ask our speakers to give more questions and more perhaps elaborated questions so that we have better feedback from the participants. And this is something that we will do with Ariel and with Gisele when we plan the webinars.

Okay, so now we reach the item number 4, Maureen, which is the cooperation with ICANN Learn. And I am happy to announce that we have Elizabeth with us here, who will tell us... This is important that we started one year ago with Jeff and we had an agreement with him, more or less, on especially making courses from our webinars, putting all our webinars on the ICANN Learn platform, so that even those who didn’t have the time or the opportunity to participate live, they can go and retrieve it and have everything that we did without losing anything. I don’t know what was done, what wasn’t done. I know that it is not done yet, so today we will discuss with Elizabeth why it wasn’t done, how we can make it be done, and how we can perhaps improve our cooperation. Go ahead, Elizabeth.

ELIZABETH ANDREWS: Hello. I’m Betsy Andrews. I’m with the Department of Development and Public Responsibility. Feel free to call me Betsy which is my nickname, but if you want to e-mail me, it’s elizabeth.andrews@icann. Thank you for inviting me to be here today. I’m really interested in answering your questions first and foremost. But I would like to echo what Maureen said, and that is I see ICANN Learn as an opportunity to serve as a repository for all of the hard work you’ve already put into your webinars, but I would like to explain that ICANN Learn classes can be a living document and a living mechanism. So we don’t just park a video on there. You have the opportunity to add text copy, edit things. We have the opportunity to translate voiceovers or captions. We also have the opportunity to put your quizzes into the ICANN
Learn course formats, and there are more and more opportunities that I’m working with the software company that provides ICANN Learn to change and make better for our users. So the main thing that I want to express today is that all the changes that are happening on ICANN Learn are a result of feedback that I’m getting from the community. So if you have an idea of something that you would like to happen or if you have questions about how things work, absolutely get in touch with me. If it’s something I can implement immediately, I will. If it’s something that needs to be discussed more broadly within the community, we can do that. If it’s something that needs to be put on a long-term list of features to add to the online learning platform, I am here to facilitate that for you. So regardless of what has gone on in the past, I want to tell you that we have this capability to make your webinars go further and to reach a broader audience. I also have the capability to interface with ICANN staff and perhaps source other experts that you may or may not already have in your rota of webinars that are going to happen. So I really would like for you to view me as a resource, view me as a sounding board. I would love to have your ideas and help take all of your hard work and just make it go that little bit further. Thank you.
TIJANI BEN JEMAA: Thank you very much, Elizabeth. What the aim of this discussion is to know what you need from us to make our webinars appear on the platform. Second, what kind of format you may do so that it will be easier to access and easier if you want to retrieve. And can you help in the preparation of our webinars so that they will be compatible with your platform.

So all this discussion should happen now so that in the next six months we will have something on the platform. We discussed that before and nothing happened. So now we need to have results. And before I give you the floor, I will see what is the question of Maureen.

MAUREEN HILYARD: Thank you, Betsy. We had a meeting with Rob Hoggarth the other day and I think it’s really valuable if you are actually a part of those discussions that we have with him, because we’re actually looking at what is the most appropriate way of putting messages across, especially to a lot of our users who aren’t very technically au fait with a lot of the information that we’re trying to direct towards them.

ELIZABETH ANDREWS: I agree. I’d be happy to participate. I’m flexible and can make myself available. I’m hearing what we need are next steps. So what I need from you is a list of priorities, of which webinars in the past you would like to be put on the platform, and that’s where we will start. In terms of format, that’s up to you. The platform is really flexible. We can do video, we can do text, we can do interactive graphic images, we can do YouTube video if you don’t want to embed a Flash video. It’s very flexible. It can be what you want it to be. One thing I envision is if there is topical overlap with projects or courses that other groups are working on, I would like to combine those efforts rather than re-inventing the wheel in different parts of the ecosystem. I would like to help bring those things together. So it may be that if you tell me you’re working on a webinar on a particular topic, I can introduce you to another group and we can have a combined effort that will be a different kind of course that we pull together, but it will be lasting.

Another point that I want to raise in terms of accessibility or in terms of timing, if you offer a webinar that is not a good time for North America, for example, or not a good time for Asia Pacific, it is nice for you to be able to immediately point someone to the ICANN Learn course. So I would like to be efficient in terms of when a webinar is prepared, I would like to get it on the platform ASAP so that you can point people in that direction. And other things in terms of translated captions and whatnot can be added later, because it is a living resource. It is something that we can continue to edit.

The other thing that I want to mention is that mobile accessibility is something that’s being developed in the background with the ICANN Learn platform, and so there is an opportunity where you can make your webinars more accessible to people who might have intermittent Internet access. And there are ways that I can work with you in terms of we don’t want to repeat material, but in terms of making maybe just video material more digestible in brief versions that can be accessible to people with differing levels of accessibility.

So the big main next step for going on is to tell me the priority of the webinars that have gone before that you would like posted, and also help me identify the people you would like for me to work with, and we can curate those courses and get them live.

TIJANI BEN JEMAA: Thank you very much, Betsy. For the previous webinars, it will be done. No problem. We have the list and will give you, and your reference will be Gisele or Ariel. They will tell us. But I am worrying about the future. I propose that we do our webinar and it will be live on the platform. Is it possible?
ELIZABETH ANDREWS: Not at present, but I think there may be a way to make that happen.

TIJANI BEN JEMAA: Okay, good. So this is [one thing]. So we will replace the live by immediate uploading on the platform just after the completion of the webinar. Okay.

Second point, we use three languages for our webinar. Can we have them on the platform? Okay, very good. This is wonderful reaction and this is, I think, very helpful. And we can also, as you said, give you the list of our topics and we try to work together. If there is something done already, we have a look at it before we perform our webinar. If there are resource that we don’t know about, you can give them to us, so it will be interactive between us, if you don’t mind. Okay, she say yes. Very good.

I have a question from Siranush, and then I will give you the floor.

SIRANUSH VARDANYAN: Thank you, Chair. Thank you, Betsy, for the work you do and this is really very helpful and I’m sure it will become a useful resource for many of end users. Except those… So together with those webinars which we are doing on At-Large level, we also do webinars on RALO levels. So we have also, for example, for Asia Pacific we have specific topics suggested by ALSs in our region, and we are running those webinars in partnership with APAC Hub. So it would be good also to coordinate our works with the GSC Team and RALOs and have those local webinars on RALO-levels webinars also posted there. They might be webinars which will be repeating the topic and I agree that we may compile and have the both sides, RALO level and At-Large levels, global level, both sides webinars posted in a combined way. But we need to also pay attention to the webinars on RALO levels as well. They are really pretty helpful.

TIJANI BEN JEMAA: Thank you, Siranush. I’d like to propose to add an item on the agenda, Capacity Building At-Large and Capacity Building RALOs. Okay.

ELIZABETH ANDREWS: I think that’s a great idea and that’s certainly something that we can do. I have posted a link in the Adobe chat that is a course that my predecessor developed to introduce people to how to take a course and how to start compiling a course. And if you look at that course, you’ll see the flexibility that we have. I can create categories, so we can create Capacity Building category that you can go to and you can see all the resources listed. And we can do that in each language. I can also create categories that incorporate the RALO-related material.

Another element of the course creation is a course – and you can see up there how it’s divided into lectures. So those bold sections, if we have one topic that could be our class curriculum, we can have multiple bold sections that could be multiple webinars. It could be material from multiple groups within the ecosystem. So we have flexibility to both separate and to compile information, and I’m hoping that that will help people that are interested specifically in one topic to start following that trail of opportunities to learn about it. Currently we have five language platforms, so we have an individual platform in each of the UN languages. But we’re working on getting a single sign-on access. So, for example, if you’re trilingual but you prefer to learn in Spanish as opposed to English, you can follow a link to the English page and see whether or not your course is available in Spanish and go directly there, whereas currently you would have to have a log-in for each of the language platforms and go directly to that course. So that’s something that we can work on streamlining.

Presenting your webinars in three language indicates to me that we can put them on each of the three language platforms, but we need to caption what’s offered in the other languages immediately. So, for example, if you’re speaking in three languages on your webinar, we need to have those captions translated or we need to have voiceovers done according to the time stamps on the video. So that's something to do to help with the collaboration, because I personally don't think that putting it only on the English website, if the majority of it is in French, is the way to go simply because if someone is specifically learning in French, we would like for them to be able to find that on the French site.

I hope that helps to be a little more clear.

TIJANI BEN JEMAA: Betsy, thank you very much. I think it is better since we have some multiple language, it's better to make the user use the right language. It is better than the captioning. The captioning is good when you don't have the possibility to hear the right language, or perhaps to people who don't speak the three languages that we are using. But I am sure At-Large people will speak at least one of those three languages.

Any other question? Any other remark? Yes, please. Okay, [Daniel].

[DANIEL]: My suggestion comes especially on creating DVDs that can be given to university students or university institutions. Like, for instance, let me see... Okay what happens that when the DVD for ICANN Learn is placed into the computer, it begins to play the respective courses, like the introduction and so forth. So this will help to solve the challenge of probably connectivity. So in cases like a community say they prefer DVD in English or French or so forth, it can easily be distributed and plugged into the computer, then they can watch and learn respectively with appropriate assessments to gauge their learning abilities. I think that would also be great, because with that you can be able to reach multiple universities, you can be able to target [a vast] communities, and we shall reduce on the challenge that we have internet connectivity problems, so what can we do about it? I think that’s a good idea. Thank you.

ELIZABETH ANDREWS: Thank you for that idea. I think it's a good one. ICANN Learn, I can’t just extract it and put it on a DVD, but we can use ICANN Learn as the platform to compile the information and then create a document that would go with a video. I can look into options of how to have that video embedded in the document. But that's not something that currently is transferrable from the online situation directly into a DVD that we could hand to a student to play. But I appreciate your feedback and that's something I'll look into.
I also wanted to clarify. Previously when you said you did the webinars in three languages, I didn’t realize that it was simultaneous audio in three different languages. So that’s actually already done. That’s really easy. We just put it on the three individual language platforms and then you have the link that you can send in that language. Thank you.

TIJANI BEN JEMAA: Thank you very much. I was about to propose you that you extract the material from the platform and to put it on another media or to make it in a file that people can download and can put on, I don’t know, a USB stick or any or DVD or anything. So this is something that you can do.

ELIZABETH ANDREWS: I will follow up on that one and see how we can make that possible and when we can make that happen.

TIJANI BEN JEMAA: Thank you very much. I have Cheryl.

CHERYL LANGDON-ORR: Thank you, Tijani. I just wanted to not take a point – and this is a pun – in time to make sure we capture that we need to do more time capturing points in our webinars. Many of the chats and activities that we do have the capability. but we’re not doing it enough. And as someone who often has to go back through both the written transcript and the audio record, to have something as simple as a time stamp routinely and automatically put in just the chat, let alone anywhere else in what we’re doing, makes a great point from which we can pivot. And I suspect a lot of what you will be doing, Betsy, will be made easier if we make that a norm. So it’s a selection within Adobe Connect. It can be done. But I think we need to make it the normal standard rather than a, “Oh, we will think about it, and often forget. Thank you.

TIJANI BEN JEMAA: Thank you very much. Betsy.

ELIZABETH ANDREWS: That’s a great idea, and you’re right, that would streamline my efforts on the back end. Another point that I wanted to make is that we have discussion built in, and you can put discussion on each of the individual lessons, like when we were looking at before the lectures that are compiled under the bold header “Lesson.” Or you can have one discussion for the whole topic. Currently it can work either with Disqus, the third-party discussion thing that you create your log-in and that links you to every opportunity where you’re using Disqus to write a comment. A lot of newspapers use that. But there is also an embedded ICANN Learn one that is unique to us. Currently the reason why you might want to use Disqus is because the internal one does not yet have notification system to ping you if somebody has responded to your comment. But this is something that we can turn on and we can turn off, and it's something that I'm monitoring already. So it is a way for the discussion to begin with the webinar, and then it is a format and a platform for that discussion to continue. And that might really help with some of the content information Ariel's been gathering with your surveys and statistics as well, because it would be an additional place for someone to provide feedback.

TIJANI BEN JEMAA: Thank you very much. Please. Go ahead.

UNIDENTIFIED MALE: [inaudible] Madagascar. And I think that you can have answered my question. Let's organize, I would say, a group so that we follow the webinars. We do have connectivity issues just like [Daniel] was saying, so it would be great to have someone in charge for 15 minutes for a Q&A of 15 minutes after the webinar. Is it something that we should organize with At-Large or the online forum? Can it be direct or later on?
TIJANI BEN JEMAA: [inaudible] Sorry, those who were... Yes, there is another possibility we can have a file on an USB key and give this USB key to those who have no connectivities at all. This is global solution.

[JALEEL]: Thank you very much. I’m [inaudible] NextGen. The question I wanted to ask... Well, first I wanted to thank you, ICANN Learn, because we have learned a lot of things, I have taken some courses and learned a lot. Thank you very much. I want to know if there is a possibility for AFRALO to have some content added [of things]. There is LACRALO, NARALO, but not AFRALO. Can we have some dedicated course to AFRALO, a course for African people? And then as it was said yesterday or today again, we need to know how we can do some e-learning in our language and we want some more local content in Arab and French so we can follow and learn more. Thank you very much.

TIJANI BEN JEMAA: Thank you, [Jaleel]. About the content creation by AFRALO, you are welcome, of course. If we can find some people who want to propose some content, we will be very happy. We are asking some subjects, some topic, for the webinar and we don’t always receive answers. So if we can have some help and some input and some topics, we will be very happy to receive it.
Offline now, I’m going to explain you how we can do it. It’s easy. She’s going to prepare – she’s going to answer my question. She didn’t say yes, but she said it was possible, so we will see when they can do it. When they will be ready to do it, we will have a file that we will be able to download to put on USB key or DVD and give to the people who have no Internet at all. We will give this content in three languages, and the people will watch that. We will be able to add some more languages later on, because it’s a little more difficult. We have a caption proposal. We can do some Arabic caption. We could also have caption just for the languages who are not used. Did I answer your question?

About the Q&A, we can do that offline. We can do anything, but when it gets much more difficult it’s difficult to implement it later on. So we want to keep that easy, and to keep that easy when we follow the course we ask the people who participate to the course to send an offline response by e-mail. And we send those responses to the speaker, to the trainer, so he knows what do you think about the course. It’s easy. It’s an easy way to do that. We can find the technological the solution to solve this problem. Yes, Ali, you have the floor.

ALI ALMESHAL: I’ve just noticed that on the website of ICANN Learn an introduction to LACRALO. Is it done by LACRALO themselves or it’s done by you, or each RALO can do his own and you can post it there?

ELIZABETH ANDREWS: I facilitate the content, so I don’t create the content. I can help you curate it and I have an educational background, so I can give you feedback about what’s effective and what students engage with most easily and what can help accommodate different learning styles. But when it comes to the actual content, that’s coming from the community. So anything that you want to do, as long as it’s relevant to ICANN and as long as it’s factual and not opinion, is something that we can put on ICANN Learn. And I want to echo this NextGen gentleman, his comment previously. I would like to have original local content in French and in Arabic. That’s a big goal for me this year. So if that’s a project you want to spearhead, I am yours to work with to make that happen. And I can help connect you with other people who would also be interested in generating that.

On that note, one of the things that I inherited and have started to discover, I’m not an Arabic speaker, but as I started to work with different people to try to stimulate more local content in Arabic, I’m realizing how different is around the world. So one of the main things I want to do with the platform is to streamline the buttons and the instructions and the e-mails that come with Arabic so that an Arabic speaker in one part of the world doesn’t feel like they have to translate or that they have to do it in French or English or any other language. I want it to be more sophisticated and more accessible. And then along those lines, those of you who do speak Arabic, if you see something that’s awkward or that doesn’t work in your region, I absolutely want you to tell me, because that’s something that the translation team and I are working on already and it’s something that’s on my radar. And that does happen in other languages as well. But that’s something that is specifically problematic with the Arabic platform right now. So I just want to make you aware that that’s something that’s on my radar, and I would love to have your help.

TIJANI BEN JEMAA: Thank you very much, Betsy. Silvia has something to say.

SILVIA VIVANCO: Yes, Ali. The LACRALO course, it was produced by LACRALO members a couple of years ago. It was a small Working Group and they developed the content and uploaded that with the help of ICANN Learn. So it’s certainly something that can be done and replicated for other RALOs and we can work on that.
And the second comment, for Betsy, we have the webinars organized in coordination with APAC Hub, and it’s basically the speakers are from APAC Hub region and they are local people. So we have the next webinar on March 22nd and I would like to invite Betsy to join that webinar. It will be also the second webinar with the live captions, so it will be very interesting maybe for you to see how that works and to continue collaborating. Thank you.

TIJANI BEN JEMAA: Thank you, Silvia. Ali.

ALI ALMESHAL: On the top of the other webinar that’s been done for the APAC Hub, we have another webinars which is most of them even in Arabic it’s done for the Middle East Working Strategy Groups with Bahar and [Fahad], so I think this will be good to be uploaded there as well.

ELIZABETH ANDREWS: Yes, definitely. I would be happy to participate in that webinar, and doing the live captioning ahead of time is something that's really helpful. We also have the potential to edit that for anything in captioning that sometimes slips through the cracks.
When it goes onto ICANN Learn we can go back in and edit it, which is great. I would love to have that original Arabic content.

And there’s one more point I wanted to make. In addition to being able to add the discussion points in the Q&A that Tijani was talking about earlier, we can certainly add that in to an ICANN Learn course, but you could also host a live chat Q&A discussion on ICANN Learn. So that doesn’t help with connectivity problems, but that does help with real-time learning. You can obviously do it in Adobe Connect at the same time that you’re doing your webinar. But if you want to do it at a different time, if you want to have a follow-up after people have digested the information, ICANN Learn is a great place to make that happen.

TIJANI BEN JEMAA: Wonderful. Wafa.

WAFA DAHMANI ZAFOURI: Just one comment about the Middle East Strategy. I think we have a meeting with your colleague yesterday and they’re aware of this Middle East Strategy. And when I asked about the compiled project, she said how do they you choose their [content] she said from these outputs. I think you already have this report.
ELIZABETH ANDREWS: I think you’re right.

TIJANI BEN JEMAA: Okay, thank you. Abdul Jalil.

ABDUL JALIL: Thank you. Can we have some certificate and when you do some Capacity Building, some training? We need a certificate and I’ve heard that some courses can be paid.

TIJANI BEN JAMAA: No. Nothing is paid and we can’t give any certificate. I’m sorry.

ELIZABETH ANDREWS: Tijani is right. ICANN Learn is always free to create a course. It’s always free to take a course. There is one group right now that is working on how to provide a certificate, but I would like to stress that that needs to come from the group. That’s not something that ICANN can issue. But so that you know, there is the capacity within the platform to basically clock the progress of a student. So from the back end, you can see that a student has to complete a lesson in order to move on to the next one. And that’s a setting that we can change. So sometimes there are courses that people want to pick and choose the lessons or lectures that they want to do, and then other times there are courses that are important to start at the beginning and go through to the end. And I just want to make you aware that that is something we can set up when we do a course, and that is something we can monitor when we do a course. So if in the future you ever did want to provide some kind of certification, you would have assurance that a student had completed specific lessons within the course. Having said that, there is a glitch that if you get to the last screen of the course and you don’t click “Complete” at the end of the last screen, the statistics that it gives to me it tells me that you are 97% through the course. And I discovered that by looking at the reports and noticing that the vast majority of students were 97% complete. And I thought, “Why are they not completing this course?” And it’s just because they’re not clicking the final “Complete” button. So I’m going to work on taking that button away, but I just wanted you to know that that’s something that factors in, in terms of completing a course and being able to monitor that.

TIJANI BEN JEMAA: Thank you very much, Betsy. May I suggest that we have a teleconference together – you and the Working Group – in, I don’t know, in some weeks? In two weeks? Something like this. And we try to decide, because now we are talking, we try to decide to take actions so that you have already time to think about it, to perhaps to consult with other people. And we will try to put together our ideas and our needs and come up to you with specific needs and specific requests. Possible? Action item? Okay. Go ahead.

HUMBERTO CARRASCO: I’m going to speak in Spanish.

Okay. Thank you for showing the example of LACRALO. I am a member of LACRALO. Yesterday I received an e-mail from [inaudible] from LACRALO from Venezuela and he wants to know - I’m asking a question on his behalf – is it possible to develop a course on IPv6 for technical people from Latin America and the Caribbean? Actually this question was stemmed from the Hub they created on this event. And he’s also asking about certification, but this answered was already given a few minutes ago.

On this issue of certification, let me say that we are working in LACRALO on this. We are developing contacts with some universities so that some of the contents that can be taught on the ICANN platform, or even the regional contents, might be certified by some Latin American universities. We have made a lot of progress with the Colombian university and we are exploring the possibilities with the other universities. Maybe this direct agreement is much faster than others through ICANN because each university, each educational institution, each country, has its own regulations in terms of certification. That’s all. Thank you.

TIJANI BEN JEMAA: Thank you very much. I really have a problem with certification, because certification may be considered as a diploma, as a degree, especially if it comes from a university. And as you said, from a country to another, from a culture to another, it’s different. What kind of certification we can have from the ICANN Learn should not be considered as a diploma. It should be considered as a certification that the student or the participants participates in this course. That’s all. This is my point of view. I don’t know what think the other members of the Working Group. Yes, Cheryl.

CHERYL LANGDON-ORR: Tijani, believe me, I hear what you’re saying and I agree in principle. But – here’s the but – I think it may be possible for us to look at clearly identifiable and uniform – because I get nervous about diversity of local certification, too – certificates of attendance in this these courses which are clearly delineateable from anything that can be interpreted or misinterpreted as having the academic rigor which I know is what you’re fearing. So I [earned] my degrees the hard way. I’d prefer other people to have to at least suffer slightly to do the same. So, yes, I think we can find a way around it but I am actually keener on having something that is clearly identifiable as real completion of, not one I’ve printed off at my neighbor’s printer. Thank you.

TJANI BEN JEMAA: Thank you, Cheryl. We are in full agreement since I said exactly that. I said a certificate of attendance – perfect. But a certification as a degree or a knowledge degree or knowledge certification, I cannot imagine that it is possible. Any other thoughts about that? So Betsy, now we will speak – moment please – we will speak about the possibility of giving the certificate. You said it is the community issue, and I understand it. Means that if we – for example At-Large is doing the course and putting it on the platform, it is up to the At-Large to prepare the certificate and to deliver it so that it will be a certificate of participation of this particular course. Is it what you mean?

ELIZABETH ANDREWS: Yes. I can track the information and I can provide it to you, but because the course content is going to be coming from so many different sources, we have some university academic courses that are coming up. We have some contracts with different universities who are going to provide content. There are different groups that are going to provide content. The certification can’t come from ICANN. It needs to come from the individual group. However, I can provide you with the information that you need to know that someone has genuinely engaged with the course. We can also set up quizzes where they have to be taken and they have to be answered correctly in order for someone to complete the course. So that might give you the information that you need. You can’t certify that someone has the skills, because you don’t know that. But you can certify that someone has completed it, gone through it, answered questions correctly.

And for the record, I would just like to tell you the action items that I need for you that might help us prepare for this next conference call. So I need three things. I need the priorities for the backlog, which we already discussed. I need your schedule of upcoming webinars so that I’m sure it’s built in to my schedule and I don’t miss something big, or so that I have the opportunity to be sure I have the time to upload something or to help you upload it immediately following the webinar. And I need a point of contact for each individual course or each topic. That is something we haven’t done in the past, but I’m noticing that some courses are we’re now two or three years down the line and I don’t know exactly whom to contact to be sure that information is correct. This is clearly coming to the fore because of the transition and a lot of information is going to change. But I need to be able to have a systematic way as ICANN Learn expands to be able to contact sort of champions of each course or of each topic and say, “Have you reviewed this in a while? It’s been six months since we spoke. Are there things that we need to update? Can I help you do that? So those are the three things I need: priority for backlog, a schedule of upcoming webinars, and a point of contact for each course to keep up to date. And also so that there’s a designee to follow the discussion and it’s not just me, because I’m not a subject matter expert. Thank you.

TIJANI BEN JEMAA: Thank you very much, Betsy. Thank you for all this. We run out of the time and the next user of this room will not be happy if we exceed the time. So I added an issue on the agenda, which is Capacity Building Working Group, Capacity Building and the RALOs. My concern – and I expressed it several times – that we are duplicating effort. When we decided to make the outreach into the university here we made it inside the Outreach Subcommittee, we discussed it in the Outreach Subcommittee, we spoke about the program in the Outreach Subcommittee. This is what I want and I prefer to do for the Capacity Building. Otherwise if we don’t do that, we had better override the Capacity Building Working Group.
Anything done in the RALO will be thought by the RALO people, decided on by the RALO people, the time is decided by the RALO people, everything is done by them. But it is in the framework of the Working Group so that we don’t duplicate effort, so that we don’t have several pieces of Capacity Building. So if this is possible, we continue. If it is not possible, I will not continue the Working Group. Because it will be a Working Group of people who are outside some RALOs, and I don’t accept it. If you have thoughts about that, please very quickly because Cheryl will be angry if we don’t finish… Okay, so…

[ADRIAN CARBALLO]: I speak Spanish.

I will be brief. I am Chair of the Foundation [inaudible]. I wanted to share with you that for some years we have a project called the School of the South. We will have it at the OAS next April for the 9th edition. The participants are all Fellows. By this time certainly all the positions have been filled in for this course. I just wanted you to know that all our events have simultaneous translation services, face-to-face, streaming, and audio channels. So my point here is to invite you to participate remotely at www.governanceinternet.org. There you can see the agenda for the event. The main topic, there are three themes: Internet governance, cybersecurity, and freedom of speech. We have entered an agreement with the Secretary General of the OAS, with the support of the Department of State, the Advisor on Cybersecurity to Obama will be there, [inaudible] will be there, I think Fadi will also be there. It’s to be confirmed. But you can download and check the agenda in the website, and this is an event that we hold on an annual basis in March/April, so I would be delighted if we see in the future applications for Fellows, for Scholars, of those who want to participate from the ALSs. Thank you.

TIJANI BEN JEMAA: Thank you very much for this information. May I ask Humberto to e-mail us the URL? E-mail it so that we can… Okay. Thank you very much for that.

So last words about the Capacity Building inside the ICANN and inside the At-Large and inside the RALOs. Yes, Cheryl.

CHERYL LANGDON-ORR: Very briefly. I just want to put it on the record how thrilled and delighted I am with the [inaudible] your team. You’re engaging us well, you’re responsive, you’re reactive, you’re not just saying the right thing, I actually trust that you will be doing the right thing. So it’s going to be great future steps and I for one want to thank you both because of the work you’ve done. Even with our Accessibility Working Group, you are here, you’re present, you’re engaged, and I trust that this is going to happen. So thank you.

TIJANI BEN JEMAA: Thank you very much, Cheryl. Yes, Wafa.

WAFA DAHMANI ZAAFOURI: I want really to thank you all, especially the staff who are working with you, also Tijani because they take this [stakehold] this Capacity Building Task Force involvement, and that’s very nice with this quiz and this surveys. I responded to this quiz and really it’s a great work, a great congratulation for Ariel and Gisele with you. And I learn also the learn of ICANN, the Learn platform because I was there in this platform and the fact to have the details with the slides when we find not only [mute] slides, there are details with these slides and this very really a great work. Thank you all.

TIJANI BEN JEMAA: Yes, I think that we have to thank very much Betsy and her department for the effort they do, and I will thank her more when we implement our cooperation.
ELIZABETH ANDREWS: Okay, I just want to say you’re very welcome and, yes, indeed, Cheryl, I do intend to deliver and work with you all to make this a resource that really works for your part of the community.

TIJANI BEN JEMAA: Thank you very much. And the last word will be a big thank to our staff, especially Gisele and Ariel, who are working with us. Also there is…what’s her name… No…Teri, who helped us with the quiz. So thank you very much all the staff, but in particular Ariel and Gisele. Thank you for you because you are participating, because you participate in the webinars and you are from the Working Group. We will send you an e-mail to confirm your membership in the Working Group and we will pay attention to have at least two members from each region in the future. So if you confirm your membership, you will be the representative of your region. If you don’t confirm, we will look for other people. Once more, you are a member of this group, so if you have something to do in your region, do it. Do it through the group. You’ll do it. We will not do it. You’ll do it. But we will help you with the, if you want, the framework, the whole framework of the Capacity Building and At-Large. Thank you very much.
CHERYL LANGDON-ORR: Ladies and gentlemen, the Cross-Community Committee on Accessibility will be convening here in a mere four minutes’ time. You are more than welcome to stay and you are more than welcome to join us. I will be – by the way, staff staying at this…
